Dear Anne,
Hi! Well,
the year is almost over.
It's doesn't seem possible. I'm so glad we got to know each other pretty well 'cause English wouldn't have been any fun without you. Remember all the good times we had? You leading the discussion in English or telling me the vocabulary words or the answers to my World History assignments; and don't forget our beautiful class presentation on Kim and that stupid song we tried to sing at Christmas time (I'll take the credit for that!) I sure hope we're in some class together next year (ofcourse you're too smart to be in any classes with me), at least we'd better be in English together or I'll never pass! I wish we had been better friends at the begining of the year, and had not fought about whether or not I should get my hair cut (you won that fight because I did get it cut - what a great personal sacrifice, wow!) You're a really great kid and you'd better stay that way!
Don't let your popularity go to your head (I don't see where it would fit with all that intelligence up there). Good Luck, forever!
Love,
Sara

Anne Pickart 10B

you're a great guy. I'll probably see you all summer because of Dad's and Ed's baseball games at Ketchikan. So I don't have to say good-bye, but one last advice before I signed off he understanding with Ted.
Anne he really needs a girl like you so he will and everything Anne. He does change because he loves you and not to hurt
you. OK?
See you,
Luv
Sue

Dear Anne,
Thanks for being a really great friend for 2 years.
I'll miss you a lot next year but we can see each other this summer and even next year and the years after. We'll both hopefully be driving this summer so there won't be much trouble getting to each other's house, right?
Have a great summer,
and will keep in touch.
Hope we get drivers
Ed together. Be good
Luv Karen

Since I have a tiny corner, I can't say much, I was going to say Good luck with Ted, but you have him just keep him OK! Of course, you know how lucky you were to have a class with Paul and thanks for all the notes you've passed. Well I'm admiring but of course so good luck in the future and thanks for just loving you.
Luv
L.W.D.H.

Keep smiling
Paul

Uma,

Another whole year has gone by and it's really been a lot of fun.
We've been through a lot together (like the moon light cruise!)
Thanks for caring what happened and helping get things straightened out. I know I would never have said anything if you hadn't mentioned it and told me to come together and both of you are extra sweet! I hope you stay together forever!!

Remember all the times in homecom. pg and slightly naive. You've helped make them really great!
See you this summer.

Love,
Megan

Anne,

It's been really fun this year & you know I've enjoyed it so much I wish we could go next year too (not for lunch but just to go for the boys) I've been a lot of fun and I really got to know you better. I'll miss you next year but I think we'll have some classes together.
Well, it was a lot of fun even if I didn't get a boyfriend but who cares?
GOOD LUCK
ALWAYS
71 Megan

Anne,

I guess maybe you're a little better patient with me. I was really nervous and I wasn't a little but I am working on it. You were great but I hope you are happy with TED.
Good luck next year because I won't be here to wish it in person.
Love L.P.

Love,
Annie

Anne,
you must be pretty small to be in a VW.

if there has to be a time to start over,
to recreate actively,
to listen carefully,
to share joyfully—
can we make it now?
now, so i can know the grandeur of you, me, us.
dancing in sunkist fields or shuffling down shoulder to shoulder halls, we are to each other an experience unique and wise.
give me one moment, one brief encounter to lay down my mind with yours—then we can know somewhere between saturday cartoons and first lipstick i stumbled into family, a caring group of misunderstandings futile attemps and small successes, with patience to wait, time to listen neither dwarfing my accomplishments or chiding my failures, when the popsicles melted and i turned, their open arms caught me—even now, that's enough you're funny like rainy days

—the last bell rings and i run to meet you to stroll on the endless shore
of your mind, sommersaulting in green fields before the storm comes and i have to go back inside.

co-creators—a risk in this blurry world, a world painted with signs that read 'please touch'—but only if we have an answer, only if the mold we present is shaped with joy and hurt and care, only if we make a little less war, a lot more love i want to sign my name to a world that's worth it can you remember lunches on green benches jumping and crying five o'clock walks down four o'clock emptied halls together people sharing times

our unique worlds now inseparable

you can tell me move!
grow!
force me to face new questions when i've barely answered the old,
give me something new,
something changed and ask me to work in it,
love with it,
become a part of it,
okay,
but come with me when i look for a hint into myself and sense i'm open to all the horizons at once, seeing each sunset colored the same and knowing it's different, singing because my joy is yours, embracing pain as happiness, crying when letting go to pick up

A new voice on the PA for morning prayers verified the rumor that Sister Eileen headed the administration

Sister Eileen, an NDA resident since the doors opened eight years ago, synchronized teacher efforts with student needs

Under a blushing exterior, Sister soothed fretting students and not so smoothly recited the Pledge of Allegiance

Father Flood stepped to a new position as president of the school

Most students grew to like Father's system of welcoming each girl to his office individually, even though a gasp was uttered when the appointment slip said it was "your turn."

Mrs. Bernadette Marcin, appointed Dean early this year, coordinated school activities and dispensed admit slips.

Students with incomplete excuses heard, Number of days absent, telephone, and homeroom."

A two by three sign permitting only two students in the office

alleviated chaos generated by PA announcements, telephone calls, and tenth of the month tuition payments

Miss Mary Seifert, school secretary, used new found elbow room to categorize mounds of mail and add more organization to three o'clock office rushes. Using the "peg board" system, bookkeeper Mrs. Ida Pearson kept records of income and expenses and took tuition channeled her way. A 16 member corps of student office assistants relieved the secretaries of extra filing, mimeographing, and answering the non-stop phone. From daily trips to the late book, Sister Rita Marie tallied lists of latecomers. When girls hit the 60 minute mark, a detention helped them break the late habit

One-cent aspirin, the sound of a plodding tractor, dust-free window ledges, and plenty of cafeteria yummies evidenced NDA's school staff

In an air-conditioned atmosphere of constant chatter, Mrs. Kathleen Cumberland and Mrs. Naomi Szajnowski repaired broken machines and handed out salt and pepper packets. Daily from 11:20 until 1 p.m., they reminded students, "Please keep the cafeteria door shut."

Confident volunteer mothers coped with student maladies in the Health Room. Phys Ed substitutes and school work strains faced Mrs. Frances Renney, school nurse, along with Mrs. Anne Frankie and her adult aids. Between interviewing and hiring, Woody Jacobs, maintenance supervisor, found time to construct bulletin boards as well as recharge batteries.

Overcoming constant student interruptions, Roscoe Chason kept rooms clean and tidy. Sparkling floors and empty trash cans testified the maintenance crew's work

To solve the question,
 "Whatever happened to Mary Jane?", Mrs. Ernest Johnson compiled a follow-up file in the guidance office

Alumnae news, including later education and present status, was indexed for future reference

Colorful pamphlets from SPJC decked hallway racks, reminding students of the importance of early planning

From college catalogues to scholarship and financial information, curious seniors queried Mrs. Johnson during lunch and study

The chance to make an 8mm. film furnished a unique experience for the library science class. Instructed by Mrs. Ruth C. Rogers, the students learned the procedure in processing a book and running the filmstrip projector. Records kept by Mrs. Rogers assigned each department certain days to utilize overhead projectors, films, and a combination filmstrip projector-record player. Whether delving into specialized reference books on Greek culture, perusing the latest Seventeen, or viewing physiology filmstrips, students and teachers used the library to full advantage.

Business law students learned their legal rights as minors and the loopholes of buying car insurance. As an end of the year project they visited a court trial in session.

Transferring journals to ledgers and balancing them prepared Mrs. Joan Wettlaufer's bookkeeping class for a career in accounting. Impromptu stories beginning "I was really surprised when . . ." gave daily typing practices as students played musical chairs by changing typewriters. While novice typists learned to differentiate papers tables from paper-bail rolls, second year students utilized timed writings to improve speed

Thread the needle, don't needle the thread, quipped Mrs. John Byrne while explaining to home economics students the knobs and buttons of their sewing machines. After viewing professional sewing techniques at Sewing Circle, sewing buddies endeavored to piece together preliminary vests and aprons. Lab catastrophes sprang from sleeves sewn in backwards, dryers with "fire drill" timers, and burnt peanut butter cookies. Cooking classes heard Mrs. Welliver, Florida Power representative, demonstrate electric appliances and quick cooking tricks. During the holiday seasons, the aroma of freshly baked cookies pervaded A-wing. Second semester girls held a fashion show evidencing acquired talents. For all classes Co-Ed magazines supplemented workbook information.

Dashing off a summary of the rise and fall of Eastern cultures, or composing questions for the "Current Events Sweepstakes" awakened social studies

students to past, present, and future events. Notetakers enjoyed the luxury of a new overhead projector that simplified the task for writers'-cramped frosh. Americanism vs. Communism alerted students to the forces of aggression. Dubbing the course "Am-Com," seniors spent a semester studying maps and charts of Communist party organization. Juniors relived 50 years of history with a time-capsule record and gained insight into the Whiskey Rebellion and colonial witchcraft through quarterly oral reports. Senior Scholastic and American Observer, as well as daily news reports, informed students of Arab plane hijackings and 1970 election issues.

students. Remembering the difference between meiosis and mitosis and analyzing changes in phenol-red trained future biologists to think logically. The old-grams-to-moles trick proved all but magic to chemistry students. Lab ventures became a success or failure as students earned an S or U on reports. Physiology introduced students to the more advanced elements of human anatomy. Quarterly reports and a visit from Dr. Joseph R. Kelly further developed students' background on the human body. Newly included in the curriculum, Integrated Science provided students with a general knowledge of both physiology and chemistry. Putting more emphasis on demonstration, Earth Science examined maps and compared experiments to discuss, answer, and ask further questions about the earth's composition

Mrs. Mary Wells offered to rent board space to her classes this year at ten cents per day to save notebooks from endless doodling, but little profit was made. Curved grades prompted more interest than line graphs as students scribbled solutions, theorems, and logarithms. Geometry classes, under the direction of Mrs. Laura Hamilton, "plugged in" problems from book to board, finding they needed not only the right answer but the proof postulate. While Algebra I struggled with inequalities, Pre-Algebra and General Math coped with negative numbers. Calculations kept Business Math students verifying pay checks and income tax and Algebra II determining their teacher's age and weight using open sentence variables. Seniors interested in "Calculus, the big game" and in covering the board with equivalent equations chose Math IV or Algebra III

Tag football scrimmages ending in torn and ripped pennies introduced freshmen to the rigors of physical education

Led by Miss Linda Ford, students applied basic tumbling stunts in the mastering of rhythmic gymnastics. Conditioning tests reached girls for volleyball and softball workouts. Shouts of "dressed" and "shoes" answered daily roll call as sophomores lined up for exercises and physical fitness tests.

The use of Bishop Barry gym allowed students to perfect basketball lay-ups and dribbling.

Girls interpreted well-known sound tracks by performing Danish ball handling routines.

As the line neared the end, a hum of "Who is carrying the Christ Child?" went up among the students. Having picked the Chi Rho, Sharon Clairmont entered behind the rest of the seniors and placed the baby in the manger bed. After a moment of reflection, the freshmen presented their gift of a rosebud and the Romeo and Juliet theme. The sophomores stood for their second Convocation, singing Savior Child and giving sandals. The beat of guitars and tambourines provided the background for The Virgin Mary Had a Baby Boy as juniors heralded Christ's birth with trumpet and birth announcement. The seniors sang their last Convocation song, Do You Hear What I Hear with all the spirit represented in their gift of the spirit plaque.

Glee Club members had to think cold with December temperatures in the 80's. With Alleluia '70 imminent, Wednesday practices spilled into Saturdays.

The scenery crew spent weekend hours painting Santa's workshop and setting up risers, Christmas trees, and silver paper. On December 19 and 20, three months of constant work and worry finally produced rewarding results.

"I hope it fits" was the whispered anticipation as juniors filed into the assembly room to begin their ring night. From Shades of Gray to We've Only Just Begun, juniors savored each moment of the long-awaited Stifled chuckles and broad smiles broke the tension. Carbed in minis, maxis, and pantsuits, girls stepped up to homeroom teachers to accept rings and formal titles as NDA juniors. Mistress of Ceremonies Claudia Olson introduced the assembly to guest speaker Mrs. Vivian Rouson who congratulated the class and charged them to accept the responsibilities of growth. Awestruck girls played with the ring on the third finger bearing the inscription, 1972. Pent up emotions broke forth in tears and laughter after the ceremony as students discovered, "The ring does make a difference."

Dressed as Barbie, cupie, and rag dolls, the Student Council welcomed students back in the first of the school assemblies

using the theme "Hello Dolly". Well accustomed to school life, the classes united as freshman Mouseketeers, sophomore Flintstones, junior Ducks, and senior Indians at the color television raffle. First floor light fixtures swayed under the quacks, war whoops, and stomp cheers made by each class claiming to be number one in ticket sales

"I'll try harder next time," vowed students after every honors assembly. NFL commemoration of JFK highlighted club sponsored assemblies. In giving his talk on dreams, Dr. Louis Polskin M.D. apologized, "I hope I don't put you to sleep."

Introducing chants like "Hey Everybody" and "From Coast to Coast", the cheerleaders

united the students in backing the Barons. Captained by Cay Figley and Kathy Bell, and coached by Miss Linda Ford, the varsity squad attended the ACA cheerleading clinic and skated down the track as their Homecoming float. By serving at Pancake Day, the eight members thanked the Boosters for new sweater vests. Improvised cheers, weekend hoarseness, and study hall practices characterized the four jv cheerleaders led by Jana Quatkemeyer. Raising money for six megaphones and new uniforms, the 12 girls held summer car washes, sold football schedule pens, and peddled Krispy Kreme donuts. Pep rallies, cartwheels, Captain Cay crowned queen, and rushed rides, strengthened already recognized cheerleader unity.

members sponsored an assembly November 23 commemorating issues of Kennedy's administration, from civil rights to space programs.

Telephone books with torn yellow pages and mountains of newspapers filled weekly paper drive trucks, winning a $10 prize for the class with the greatest donations. Participants in debate and extemporaneous speaking at area school forensic meets strove to add points and a ruby to their accomplishments. With joint meetings at Dixie Hollins High School and St. Petersburg Junior College, 15 members of future secretaries

perfected skills necessary in the business world. Limited to juniors and seniors taking at least two courses, the club was one of the three in the city chartered to the National Secretaries Association. Guest speaker Dorothy Bucklad officiated at the induction ceremony, reappearing throughout the year to offer experienced advice on secretarial careers. An FSA pantsuit day in mid-January brightened the school with chic new outfits from Santa. Under the direction of advisers Mrs. Barbara Counts and Mrs. Joan Wettlaufer, the club arranged visits with local businesses and viewed films for better understanding of secretarial duties.

daily amused 85 preschoolers. Monthly committees decorated the schoolhouse with seasonal pumpkins and Santa Clauses. On October 7, Curt Thomas, Bayside Civitan president, welcomed 22 new members at a potluck induction with Exchangettes. "Trick or treat for UNICEF" resounded on Halloween as Barry Civitan and Civinettes collected candy and $40 for underprivileged kids. With each class donating baskets of canned goods and turkeys, the club arranged their first Thanksgiving food drive. Canvassing apartments and shopping centers earned $117 for a statewide hemophilia drive. After hours of tacking such personality posters as Paul Newman and Tweety Bird to trim the cafeteria, Civinettes added finishing touches with "Betty Crocker, your buns are done". Mrs. Mary Wells found fruitcake lining her back wall and tray favors crowding the shelves, but prized the Inner City Booster Club plaque as Father Mattimore's thanks for their work at IC.

Moore: Seniors Kathy Greer and Chris DeCosmo forcefully demand senior status on our Center's Board of Directors. They have been on the Board for years but have not been able to finish line because of their sick mothers. I think they are a good example of how to run a business and conduct your life on the road. We will give them the torch to begin NDA's annual fight day.

Adding a new dimension to competitive sports

swimmers splashed 20 laps for warm-ups and trotted through jogging exercises in preparation for area meets Monday and Wednesday volleyball practices perfected smashing spikes, forceful serves, and teamwork—key roles in making NDA the number one team for the fourth consecutive year. New shirts of royal blue and white gave them the incentive for tiptop action.

JV's upset to Tampa Catholic marred their perfect slate, ranking them as number two for the season.

Hopetuls for the 1971 softball team demonstrated skills under the guidance of Miss Linda Ford.

Choice of members depended on batting, fielding, and accuracy in throwing.

These skills

combined to make a potential number one team for this year's softball season.

frosh self nominations yield wholehearted class officers

The freshmen, petrified by (?) by 400 unfamiliar faces came, watchful and listening. As weeks passed, five homerooms molded the spirit of '74. Raffle drive enthusiasm dazzled upperclassmen and threatened senior status by holding first place for a week.

A surprise Halloween party with lots of decorated goodies spooked big sis' with frosh thoughtfulness. In the backbone of junior spirit, little sisters urged them on at Powderpuff and shared their joy at Ring Ceremony. With Bishop Barry, freshmen received first place for their Homecoming float, and a cash prize. Adjusting to more complicated schedules, freshmen challenged foreign language and Algebra I, fighting three-minute-crowded hallways with flailing arms. Searching minds probed "Why's?" of NDA and reacted to Calley's sentencing in discussion and petition. Having survived empty vending machines, dressing out on brisk days, and bruised fingers from clackers, freshmen reflected feelings of individuality to accompany them into sophomore year.

talented sophs 'swing into spring', model original garb

Feeling "experienced", sophomores returned to big and little friendships, phys. ed shower fights, and a renewed spirit of enthusiasm

Characterizing Pebbles, Bam-Bam, and the rest of the Flintstone clan, sophs struggled through raffle drives and toilsome academic schedules. Throne decorations involved sophs in Homecoming activities and a kleenex float of Joe Namath's shoe captured second place. Supporting their big sisters on the gridiron, ten powderpuff cheerleaders spurred Brobdinagian Seniors to victory.

Soph spirit in sneaker day merited golden tennis shoes for homeroom 10C. Netting $300, the sophomore fashion show was the biggest money making project of the year. After weeks of hard work on decorations, sewing mothers, reluctant brothers, and 30 girls modeled homemade creations to inspire audience to "Swing into Spring." Involvement in club elections signalled changing status. Sharing in graduation, sophs held a breakfast ending their years as underclassmen.

officers spur juggernaut juniors in group unity, poll varying views Dubbing themselves big sisters, juniors stepped to the ranks of upperclassmen, linking spirit with rubber duckies. Three locations and a loudspeaker on 34th Street earned $200 to split with Barry boys in a November car wash. Branded as Juggernaut Juniors, an energy packed team ran laps and touched toes in preparation for the powderpuff clash of mind and muscle. Following the class dance, 56 players strolled into Jeannie Braun's house with pillows and blankets for a sleepless night. Convocation found juniors singing The Virgin Mary had a Baby Boy and offering a trumpet and birth announcement. Two and a half years of accomplishments, errors, and unity materialized into class rings on January 6 as juniors 'began amid shades of gray' Bottle drive results proved their stupendous efforts, as juniors canvassed neighborhoods for depositable bottles to capture the lead. Age of Aquarius emerged as prom theme, accompanied by zodiac posters, cherub fountains, and the music of Azul. With prom plans completed and summer ahead, juniors' thoughts turned to college applications and up and coming senior responsibilities.

officers' encouragement stimulates senior raffle victory, spirit plaque

Graduation gowns, diplomas, and tears ended four years of peddling raffle tickets, and wearing green plaid skirts for the seniors

Enthusiastic from the beginning, seniors claimed the $100 first prize in the raffle drive.

Spurred by Denise's feather pulling, daily homeroom cheers, and 12A's last minute money collection, the seniors brought in $600 the last day to assure a 6% victory

Kathy "Flash" Bell's three touchdowns, Mother Stephanie, "Injun", and blue jerseys lettered with BS and "senior power", led Brobdingnagian Seniors to a 24-18 victory at Powderpuff Squeals of surprise and relief resounded when seniors won their first spirit plaque

Happy birthday to anonymous Jean Williams, a bad case of senioritis, Saturday donut sales, and "only 62 more days left to go" brought the senior class together for their last year.

French III Hood drill and seventh period physiology added humor to academic subjects while pop vocabulary quizzes and

Spanish III and Chemistry II classes at BB tested inquiring minds

Hard work to attain academic prowess proved worthwhile when seniors found in their mailboxes, "Congratulations . . . you have been accepted . . ."

Dear Anne,

I really don't ever know what to say in these year books. A lot of times I think the things people put in is nothing but a joke or its really phony. As you can tell I am stalling trying to think of something to say that is ⁱⁿ y. I took such a small space. I know we've had some good times and times of madness, disappointment and war with each other. But I hope the last three times ^{or things about} will be forgotten. You have been a good and sweet ^{friend} ~~namely~~ I ~~love~~ ^{love} you. I ment it last time I don't think I know but him in his own mind I guess never ever hate or dislike him again. But I won't like him as much as did. Every one will have to wait till him + me.

reacting to flurries of life that messed our hair and our thoughts—a time has been shared that made us quieter,
wiser,
humbler,
some more defiant;
in emerging,
we are embarrassed into being more than we thought, angered into doing less than we should we know,
for it was a time
we made together

Ann,
 Foreign camera jumped out and a lot of summer exams, that's the way of getting out of school. It's just you two year with a lot of hard work involved, and a lot of fun work.

 The main thing is to go to school.

about
 of the new summer & semi dances!
 Have a hot, fun,
 summer.

 ps good luck on exams!

[Faint handwritten notes, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side.]

reaching back, i can pull at experiences where they are nestled and still feel the ballooning of my emotions crystallized happenings, put into the slot labeled
"memories—
good and bad", as they should be,
wrapped up in wads of classes

acknowledgements

the work has been done by 18, but in helping the student body, faculty, and community recall, hundreds have made an effort for this interest we extend our gratitude to . . . Paragon Press in the personage of Mr. Van Carpenter, Bryn-Alan and Stone Studios for time and quality to the mothers who generously volunteered to organize with us a most successful rummage sale . . . to our parents for keeping dinners warm and car keys available . . . to S. Eileen and the faculty for enduring the inconvenience of picture days . . . to our 500 most valuable supporters . . . to Karen, Joan Carol, Helen, and Peggy who eagerly agreed to type and label when staff power was short . . . to our advertisers for both the tangible and the intangible . . . to SAM, to whom we finally, sincerely say thank you epilogue this is the time, year, celebration we have made together fill in between the lines personal stories of you and me, she and them fill in the honors, fill in the detentions draw yourself in to the club picture, the classroom antics scribble out the teacher you just can't stand, the kid who bothered you pretend you hear the boisterous enthusiasm of the raffle assembly, off-key attempts at music practice, or Father Mouch's sermons taste again your cafeteria birthday cake or the tears of not receiving one, the cold of a snowball morning hold firm again the handshake of peace, last dimes, well earned honors certificates, spirit plaques grope for faces of your class, voices of friends—even the ones who couldn't stay reshare the secrets, the evasive answers listen for tuition pleas, morning prayers, "we acclaim you jumbled moments, racing thoughts—active, apathetic we have retold the visible, the voiced tenderness, fatigue, joy, wisdom cannot be seen on film or scribbled into an amateur's writing they are tucked into the uniqueness that is 1971 you and i—thank you, goodbye
